Remote Monitored Systems sees big opportunity with P2F acquisition

What does RMS do?

Remote Monitored Systems PLC (LON:RMS), formerly known as Strat Aero, has two main investments: Gyrometric and CloudVeil.

Gyrometric provides a way remotely monitor rotating shafts such as those used in wind turbines, ships and manufacturing operations to minimise downtime.

CloudVeil is a security and risk management consultancy in the early stages of its development.

In August, Remote Monitored also agreed to buy Pharm2Farm, a hydroponics specialist that has also established a business making anti-viral facemasks, though the deal still needs to be approved by shareholders.

How is it doing?

In September, RMS said it expects substantial revenues to be generated by Pharm 2 Farm from the sale of anti-viral face masks.

Trevor Brown, chief executive, said: "Since we announced the proposed acquisition, the market for Pharm 2 Farm products, in particular for face masks, has continued to grow exponentially.

P2F is setting up a production line that will be able to produce up to 5mln standard or anti-viral face masks per month.

"The successful development of a face mask with anti-viral properties will, we believe, generate substantial revenue for the enlarged group," said Brown.

"Proof of Concept for the efficacy of the anti-viral mask is imminent and mask production is anticipated to commence in the first quarter of 2021".

Elsewhere, RMS said Cloudveil is currently negotiating with a London-based law firm over a security programme and had also bid for a testing contract for one of the UK's largest public sector financial services institutions.

Gyrometric, meanwhile, is set to start a three-month trial at a Tarmac cement manufacturing operation now that a site has become available.

RMS added that for the half-year to June it recorded a loss of £253,000 (£381,000) on revenues of £58,000 (£18,000). Cash reserves were £360,000.
