GlobeX Data to partner with S&P company, provide cloud security services

GlobeX Data Ltd (CSE:SWIS) (OTCQB:SWISF) is in the final stages of setting up a partnership with an S&P firm, which would offer the company's secure business cloud solutions package to the firm's more than 100,000 associates.

The identity of the partner will be revealed once a launch date for GlobeX's service has been selected, the company said.

The package includes DigitalSafe, GlobeX's Swiss-hosted secure document management and collaboration cloud tool, which is equipped with a data backup, secure file share, a password manager and a secure email; and PrivaTalk, the company's secure communications suite, which includes encrypted messaging, secure email and encrypted video and voice communication.

Both services also come with Custodia, GlobeX's end-to-end encrypted email service with its proprietary SecureSend technology.

"We are very excited to have been selected by such a globally renowned company," CEO Alain Ghiai said in a statement. "There is a sharp increase in demand for secure business solutions for work from home workforces.

"The unprecedented situation COVID-19 has put global businesses under pressure to provide secure remote business management tools for their employees, and has created an increased awareness for secure cloud business services such as DigitalSafe, PrivaTalk and our encrypted email service Custodia. We look forward to deploying our solutions as soon as we can in order to benefit our partners and their associates in the US and Canada."

Headquartered in New York and Toronto, GlobeX has developed a suite of cloud-based storage, disaster recovery, document management and encrypted email tools for communication.
